

OCTOBER TERM OF CIRCUIT COURT

LARGE NUMBER OF CRIMINAL CASES. JURY IS DRAWN.

The October term of Circuit court will open at the Court house in this city next Tuesday afternoon with the largest number of criminal cases on the docket to be disposed of for some time. Two of these were carried over from last term of court. Hon. Guy E. Smith of Gladwin will preside as usual.

The criminal cases as they appear in the calendar are as follows:
The People vs. Tom Butler, violation of the Prohibition law.
The People vs. William H. Mosher, violation of the Prohibition law.
The People vs. John Parker, violation of the Prohibition law.
The People vs. Henry Patton, assault with intent to kill.
The People vs. Vern Hyde, Clarence Crane and Vern Konkle, violation of the Prohibition law.
The People vs. Art Leppard and Clayton Ginchik, breaking and entering.
There are two non-jury civil cases as follows:
Jaxon Steel Products company vs.

McIntyre & Nelson, assumpsit.
The Alpena Battery and Service Corporation vs. Seeley B. Wakeley, assumpsit.

One chancery case: John Morrissey vs. Julia LeVature, petition to modify decree.
Two other chancery cases, in which no progress has been made for more than one year, appear on the calendar, as follows:
Annie E. Bainfield vs. Louis Bainfield, divorce.
Edith J. Duclos vs. William Duclos, divorce.

A list of petit jurors has been duly drawn for this term.

POP

A Bottle of Fresh Noise.

(Notes of the Grayling Schools.)

Well here we are at last. The notorious P. O. P.
High school classes have been organized as follows:
Class Advisor—Miss Fuller.
President—John Phelps.
Vice-President—Archie Crippa.
Sec. and Treasurer—Maxwell Yahr.
Junior—
Class Advisor—Miss Bellows.
President—James Richardson.
Vice-President—Florence Stephan.
Secretary—Margaret Monclair.
Treasurer—Finley Klingensmith.
Sophomores—
Class Advisor—Miss Hainline.
President—Donald Reynolds.
Sec. and Treas.—Helen Ziebell.
Freshmen—
Class Advisor—Miss Gideon.
President—Miss Stipan.
Vice-Pres.—Russell Robertson.
Sec. and Treas.—Vernon Klingensmith.

High School orchestra is now under the direction of Miss Ginech. The members are:
Rose Cassidy—Piano.
Herman Hanson—Violin.
Archie Crippa—Cornet.
Don Reynolds—Cornet.
Geo. Granger—Violin.
Beatrice Trudo—Violin.
Albert Trudo—Cornet.
Finley Klingensmith—Drums.

Mr. Brown, the physical director is taking his 8th hour class out to the base ball park and teaching them the game of Soccer foot ball. We'd like to see some good interesting games pretty soon.

The tennis court is in fine condition and the gymnasium classes are using it during the fine weather. A plan is being made to organize classes for all students.
In October the testing week for schools in Michigan commences. Material for the test has already been received, and preparations are being made. The test includes English and Latin in the high school, and spelling, reading and arithmetic in the grades. The final results will be summarized under a definite average which will be made for all and that mark will be given for each school.

Debating has been introduced into our school and a first team is being tended by seven or eight industrious students. Grayling is on the Michigan League Debating list and is the only town on the list that has not showed "figit." We are trying very hard to organize a team and the support of all students is needed. Pleasant times may be had this winter by the debating club so if you are not already a member sign up with Miss Bellows at once. An opportunity for all.

The Eighth Grade had a Weenie roast in Connies grove Monday night. A very enjoyable time was had by all. The High School faculty was very nicely entertained by the high school girls Saturday night in the gymnasium.

Fern Hum, "Russell, don't you want me to bother you?"

Russell Yahr, "Not so you could notice."

Kristine Salling in Chemistry, in giving the properties of water began by saying "it's tasteless."

Miss Fuller in Chemistry: Now class, you must make your teacher lab aprons real long or you'll find him in the boys' room.

Don Miss Ginech, I cannot go to orchestra practice tonight because I have got a cold sore on my lip.

Miss Ginech—I pity you for I know what that is myself.

Miss Fuller on Monday morning: Order—order back there.

Ernest Freshman: Ham and eggs, please.

Mr. Smith was in Cheboygan last Friday refereeing interscholastic foot ball.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

County Agricultural Agent

LIMESTONE, LEGUMES, LIVESTOCK

MEAN PROFITS IN FARMING

Very Successful.
From every point of view the Land Clearing Schools in Maple Forest and Grayling were highly successful. The weather was perfect; the work went off well, and the attendance was splendid. How the folks did turn out! It is, indeed, refreshing to have the people turn out when we try to have a meeting for their benefit. If we would always turn out in sufficient numbers there would be a good many demonstrations and specialists that we could secure free for this county; but we dislike to bring them here and not have an attendance sufficient to warrant the expense to the state. Staying at home can be overdone.

Apple—More Money From Them.
Many report apples wasting. Let's turn that waste into money. Turn off what used to be wasted by turning bone into handles, buttons, etc.; blood, into fertilizer and other products; meat scraps into tankage; saving hair for use in plaster.
The cotton ginn used to throw away the cottonseed and find them a nuisance to dispose of. Now, there is not enough cotton seed to supply the dairymen who use it as feed.

Same is true with best pulp that used to be thrown away, and which now is a prominent dairy feed.

Try These Suggestions.
Winter apples that do not find a ready sale this fall, should be carefully hand picked, without bruises, wrapped separately in paper, packed in a cold cellar, to be sold late in winter, when the glut of apples is over.
In New England it has been the practice for generations to bury apples in pits, covered with straw, then with dirt.

Some varieties, dug out of such pits in the spring will be found hard and sound as ever.

Apple Butter Without Boiled Cider.
Those who recall having away back in New England, New York State, Indiana, Ohio or Southern Michigan, bread and butter spread thick with homemade apple butter, will say I am right, when I declare that good apple butter is wonderful.

There should be more ungalahed apples worked up into apple butter here, for home use and for sale.

Put up in quart or two quart cans lots of it could be sold in Grayling during the winter.
Cut up and core apples and cook until tender. Put through colander. Add sugar to make sweet as desired. Add cloves and cinnamon, if liked. Cook until thick, stirring often to prevent burning.

Fruit Butter.
Never, until two years ago, had I experienced the delights of fruit butter, a kind of cousin to apple butter, but different.

Mr. Merrill is a master of the art of making fruit butter. She mixes two, three, four or five kinds of fruit, thus being able to secure a wide range of flavors.

Mr. Merrill says:
"Prepare apples as for apple butter. Put through colander. Cook and sweeten to taste. Then add a can more of sugar, as much as you like, or huckleberries. Sometimes two or three kinds. Boil down. Very nice."

Carrot and Apple Butter.
One pint tart apple.
One pint grated raw carrot.
Two cups sugar.
Grated rind and juice of one lemon.
Cook apple until tender. Put thru colander. Add the other ingredients. Cook until thick and clear. Seal in hot jars.

Apple Catsup.
Pare and core two quarts apples.
Cook until soft.
Put through colander.
Add two cups sugar, two teaspoons each pepper, cloves, mustard, cinnamon, salt.
Add four onions chopped fine.
Cook until thick, or about one hour. Seal while hot in sterilized jars.

Seed Corn.
Better save a lot of it while the weather is good. Should have been saved from the standing stalk. Save twice as much as you think you will want. A good farmer will keep a year's seed corn ahead. After saving the great trick is the drying.

Two factors which will largely determine the yield of next year's corn crop, are the selection and curing this fall of seed to be sown next season. In selecting corn for seed or when making the general crop are too costly to be continued. Seed corn usually gives a better yield than any other corn.

stands. It is extremely important that the most mature and highest yielding corn of this season's crop be selected and properly stored to furnish seed for planting next spring.

Advantages of Field Selecting Seed Corn.

The great advantage of selecting seed corn in the field before the crop is harvested lies in the fact that mature corn is secure and that a study of the plant on which the ear grew and of its environment can be made. In selecting from the shock or from the crib little is known of the parent.

Dry Immediately and Store Properly.

Hang by strings or wire trees, or place on racks, no ears touching.
Place in a freely ventilated, dry room where freezing will not take place.

The vitality of moist corn is sapped by molds and is injured by freezing. Properly dried corn resists injury from freezing and molding.

Curing and Storing Seed Corn.

Good seed corn can only be secured by thoroughly drying carefully selected mature ears before being exposed to freezing weather. In late September and during October corn as it comes from the field contains from thirty to forty per cent moisture. In this condition it is easily damaged by molding and freezing. In order to retain its vitality it must be rapidly dried so as to pass through the winter with a moisture content of twelve to fifteen per cent.

Immediately after harvest, corn for seed should be placed where it will receive free ventilation in order to dry rapidly. No two ears should be allowed to touch. Many excellent devices for drying and curing seed corn are in common use. The ears may be strung on binder twine and hung from a rafters. Wire racks on which the ears are impaled may be made from woven wire fences, or may be purchased. Racks may be easily constructed from two by four and laths on which the ears may be laid. These racks should be placed in the attic or a spare room in the house, tool room, etc.

A well-ventilated room is necessary. A cellar without furnace is as a rule a poor place to store seed corn. During the early period of drying all windows should be opened so as to remove excess moisture.

Corn properly dried will not be greatly damaged by freezing but it is best to store where it will not be exposed to extreme cold.
Where large amounts of seed are to be handled, special corn drying houses are desirable, equipped with numerous windows or panels which will give free circulation of air, and a stove to furnish artificial heat to hasten drying and prevent freezing.

This fall is the time to select Michigan grown corn for next year's crop. Corn from other states is often not well adapted to Michigan conditions. To insure a sufficient supply of good seed corn to plant Michigan's crop the coming spring, the concerted action of all Michigan corn growers in selecting and storing the best corn for seed this fall is necessary.

Some Seed Corn Facts.

By selection in field during late September and October, mature high yielding ears which will germinate can be secured.

About one corn grower in one hundred in Michigan selects seed corn in the field before harvesting the main crop. If every farmer field selects, a great increase in corn yield will result.

Seed corn of high vitality can only be secured by drying rapidly immediately after picking and storing in a well ventilated room.

Dependable seed cannot be secured from the crib.

Good seed means a good stand. Planting poor seed results in frequent mistakes. It costs as much to cultivate a poor stand as a good one. It pays to handle seed corn properly.

A little work this fall in field selecting, drying and storing seed corn insures:

Better germination and a more vigorous start next spring.

More full hills and fewer spaces in the row.

A heavier and richer crop for the silo.

A larger yield of well ripened corn.

Do You Belong?
If you belong to the "Move Forward" bunch here are some little things for you to attend to:

(1) Save and properly cure choice seed corn.
(2) Save enough potatoes from best yielding hills, while digging to plant an acre.
(3) Sow rye wherever possible to be plowed in under next spring.
(4) Build ice house.
(5) Fix over poultry house to be clean, dry, have plenty of light and no lice or mites.

(6) Build simple cement gutter in back of horses and cows to catch many dollars worth of liquid manure that your farm needs.

(7) Make definite plans to get 8 or 10 tons of pulverized limestone along with the other fellows.

and special prizes. A good pair of silver foxes frequently are sold for $2,500.00. Such a price, says Mr. Goff, is extortionate and it is only the uninitiated who are willing to pay it. His silver foxes are as perfect as can be found anywhere and, he says, can be sold for several hundred dollars less. A pair of foxes will produce from three to eight foxes each year which would make a good income even at $1,500 a pair. The pelts are worth about $1,000 each. The Goffs have a pleasant home on Big Creek, 5 miles from Lovells, where their fur farming is being conducted. Mr. Goff is a college bred man and says that he prefers this class of business as it brings greater remuneration than any other line he knows of.

Further honors have come to Crawford county thru the efforts of Z. Alvin Goff who owns and operates a fur farm near Lovells. He made an exhibit of some of his animals at the Saginaw fair and carried away the highest honors for having the finest specimens of male and female silver foxes.

He says that there was much competition in this class and he was very happy over his victory. He also won first prizes for the best male skunk and best female mink. His exhibit also won several second prizes.

Many motorists have discovered that if they drive along in the middle of the road at high speed, everyone else will get out in two bushes.

Automobiles sell well, while many of the necessities of life go slow. Reason is that automobile dealers usually advertise freely.

Silks and Velvets Popular;

Winter Hats Now Appear

FOR afternoon and evening dresses, fashion at present seems to have eyes only for silks and velvets in lustrous, and often intricate, weaves. These new weaves bring to designers fabrics that are rich and elaborate, but continue to be simple and clinging, as they must be to keep up with the enthusiasm for draperies.

The new fabrics merit study; some of them are printed in raised designs, others have surfaces described as blistered, "duted" or "crinkled," they are all descendants of the metalasse of other days.

In the face of all these charming debutantes among fabrics, satin charmeuse and crepe de chine continue to lead the procession of beautiful fabrics for fall. Other things may come and go, but they seem destined to go on forever—too fascinating to be neglected.

The handsome and very interesting afternoon frock pictured might be developed in any of the new fabrics, but it is shown made of brown charmeuse. It is a masterpiece of beautiful draping. It has a tunic, with uneven hemline, merging into long ends at each side, and into a crushed girle, of the startling colors, embroidered against the front crown and trailing off to the edge of the wide brim at the right. The texture of the rich velvet measures up to the glory of its plumage.

An off-the-face shape, at the right, is made of dark velvet, with a soft crown and brim facing of velvet in a lighter color. Cut-out flower motifs, of the darker velvet, are applied to the brim and outlined with brilliant bugle beads. One can imagine it in black, faced with almond green, or milghonette, brightened by a glitter of iridescent green beads. When Tennyson sang of "the splendor dear to women," he revealed his insight into one of their oft-returning moods; they betray a love for splendor every once in a while.

Silks and Velvets Popular:

Winter Hats Now Appear

FOR afternoon and evening dresses, fashion at present seems to have eyes only for silks and velvets in lustrous, and often intricate, weaves. These new weaves bring to designers fabrics that are rich and elaborate, but continue to be simple and clinging, as they must be to keep up with the enthusiasm for draperies.

The new fabrics merit study; some of them are printed in raised designs, others have surfaces described as blistered, "futed" or "crinkled," they are all descendants of the metalasse of other days.

In the face of all these charming debutantes among fabrics, satin charmeuse and crepe de chine continue to lead the procession of beautiful fabrics for fall. Other things may come and go, but they seem destined to go on forever—too fascinating to be neglected.

The handsome and very interesting afternoon frock pictured might be developed in any of the new fabrics, but it is shown made of brown charmeuse. It is a masterpiece of beautiful draping. It has a tunic, with uneven hemline, merging into long ends at each side, and into a crushed girdle, of the

An off-the-face shape, at the right, is made of dark velvet, with a soft crown and brim facing of velvet in a lighter color. Cut-out flower motifs, of the darker velvet, are applied to the brim and outlined with brilliant bugle beads. One can imagine it in black, faced with almond green, or mignonette, brightened by a cluster of iridescent green beads. A more sedate hat at the left is made of panne velvet in rose taupe, with soft crown and upturned brim. The trimming is a heavy cord, covered with taupe velvet, and large satin-surfaced beads in the same color.

At the bottom of the group a fine felt heralds the return of these lovely hats. It is a tailored model with very ingenious trimming of folded ribbon about the brim edge and a sunflower rosette, made of the same folded ribbon, posed on the crown.

When Tennyson sang of "the splendor dear to women," he revealed his insight into one of their off-retaining moods; they betray a love for splendor every once in a while.

In millinery, and especially in winter hats, there is a chance for a bit of splendor for everyone. Fabrics are rich, brocades and metal tissues are dazzling, plumage is gorgeous, embroideries and trimmings draw inspiration from Persia and India (and we look to the East for splendor). A little group of four hats, shown here, reflects that regal note that appears in all the styles.

The velvet-covered shape at the top of the group, in dark brown Lyons velvet, becomes the background for a royal parrot in ers and blouses for outdoor wear and the elastic waistline permits one to swing one's arms with all the fervor at one's command.

Low Knit in Collars.

A youthful collar expression that is noted repeatedly in the imported frock collections, stresses cowl development. Most of the collars, however, introduce unusual back handling, wherein the collar ends are permitted to hang unfastened, or are diverted into another section of the frock.

Many Wear.

Silp-on dresses made with an elastic gathered waist are very popular and are shown in many stores. Many women prefer these to skirts or blouses.

Descendants of Mary's Lamb.

Col. Thomas Powell of Columbus, Ohio, veteran of the Civil war and brother of the famous Gen. Eugene Powell, is the proud owner of "Lamb," the only living descendant of Mary's little lamb. The original Mary was Mary Sawyer of Sterling, Mass., who was eight years old at the time celebrated by the poem in 1814. The immortal verses, by the way, were written by John Roulston.—From the Argonaut.

Feed them RAT-NIP —and Not a Rat Can Escape

If there are rats about your premises why not let us send you a tube of the new and remarkably effective discovery, Rat-Nip? The great trouble with rat poisons is to get all rats to eat them. Rat-Nip is just as attractive to rats as Catnip is to cats and they all succumb to it, even the wily, old fellows. One or two Rat-Nip feasts and every rat will positively be exterminated from house, store, barn, stable or garage. Not one will remain.

Rat-Nip is safe, easy and clean to handle. It is put up in neat, collapsible, metal tubes and can be readily squeezed out, without coming in contact with the hands or anything else. One tube goes a long way. Price 30 cents.

Come in and look over our line of goods. We hope to have the pleasure of seeing you soon.

You Can Get Back Your Grip on Health

Persons suffering from stomach trouble and who are underweight find an ever-ready friend in Tanlac. This celebrated medicine has ended indigestion and increased the weight for thousands of people everywhere. Mrs. O. D. Plaherty, 1905 Grace St., Lynchburg, Va., says:

"My son's health was fully restored by Tanlac and he actually gained twenty pounds in weight. After every meal he suffered terribly from severe pain, palpitation and shortness of breath, and had awful headaches. He was terribly nervous, too. He is working now every day and is in as good health as he ever was."

Under nourishment is the cause of most cases of under weight. Tanlac enables the stomach to extract the healthy nutriment from the food, builds up the whole body and increases the weight to normal. Millions of people have testified to its great benefits. Get a bottle today at any good druggist. Advertisement.

SYNOPSIS—At Thornton Fairchild's death his son, Robert, learns there has been a dark period in his father's life which for almost thirty years has caused him suffering. This secret is hinted at in a document left by the father. Fairchild, who also informs Robert he is now owner of a mining claim in Colorado, and advising him to go to the Colorado, a lawyer, Beaumish, tells Robert his claim, a silver mine, is at Ohadi, thirty-eight miles from Denver. He also warns him against a certain man, "Squint" Rodaine, his father's enemy. Robert decides to go to Ohadi. On the road to Ohadi, from Denver Fairchild assists a girl apparently in a frenzy of haste, to change a tire on her auto. "When she has left, the sheriff and a posse appear. In pursuit of a bandit, Fairchild, bewildered, misleads them as to the direction the girl had taken. At Ohadi Fairchild is warmly greeted by his mother, Howard, a boarding-house keeper, for his father's sake. From Mother Howard Fairchild learns something of the mystery connected with the disappearance of "Squint" Rodaine, his father's co-worker in the mine. He meets the girl he had assisted, but she denies her identity. She is "Squint" Rodaine, Judge Richmond's daughter. Visiting his claim, Fairchild is shadowed by a man he recognizes from descriptions as "Squint" Rodaine. Back in Ohadi, his father's old friend, Harry Harkins, a Cornishman, summons him from England to help Fairchild, who has been hailed him, with joy. The girl he had assisted and have not sufficient funds to have it pumped dry. Later in the day, Fairchild announces that he practically saw Harkins fall into the flooded mine, and evidently is drowned. Harkins being a general favorite, the entire population turns out to clear the flooded mine. When the work is practically done, Harry appears. It had been a shrewd trick, and the men take it as a good joke. Fairchild learns that Judge Richmond is dying, and that he and Anita are the power of the Rodaines. They begin, as partners, to work the mine. In their hearts both fear Harkins was killed by Thornton Fairchild and his body buried in the day in which destroyed the mine. At the "Old Times Ball" Fairchild dances with Anita, the daughter of the mine. The disclosure of Maurice Rodaine, son of "Squint," supposed to be the man who had killed Harkins, leads to the dance and shoots a merry-maker. Maurice Rodaine claims he "remembered" the bandit. Harkins. The latter is arrested. Fairchild interferes to save Anita from the bullying of the two Rodaines, and is mysteriously shot. Anita's apparent ingratitude.

CHAPTER X

The Rodaines were on the sidewalk when Fairchild came forth from the Richmond home, and true to his instructions from the frightened girl, he brushed past them swiftly and went on down the street, not turning at the rautered invectives which came from the crooked lips of the older man, not seeming even to notice their presence as he hurried on toward Mother Howard's boarding house. In his creaky feet he sought to think, but in vain.

After hours, daylight began to streak the sky. Fairchild, dull, worn by excitement and fatigue, strove to rise, then laid his head on the pillow for a moment of rest. And with that perversion which extreme weariness so often exerts, his eyes closed, and he slept, to wake at last with the realization that it was late morning, and that some one was pounding on the door. Fairchild raised his head.

"Who is it?"

"No one you know—yet. I've come to talk to you about your partner. May I come in?"

"Yes," Fairchild was fully alive now to the activities that the day held before him. The door opened, and a young man, alert almost cocky in manner, with black, snappy eyes showing behind horn-rimmed glasses, entered and reached for the sole chair that the room contained.

"My name's Parrell," he announced. "Randolph P. Parrell. And to make a long story short, I'm your lawyer."

"My lawyer?" Fairchild stared. "I haven't any lawyer in Ohadi. The only—"

"That doesn't alter the fact. I'm your lawyer, and I'm at your service. And I don't mind telling you that it's just about my first case. Otherwise I don't guess I'd have gotten it."

"Why not?" The frankness had driven other questions from Fairchild's mind. Parrell, the attorney, grinned cheerily.

"Because I understand it concerns the Rodaines. Nearly everybody has a little money stuck into their enterprises. And I see I have no money at all. I'm not financially interested. And I don't being interested, I'm wholly just fair and willing to fight 'em to a standstill. Your partner's in jail, as I understand it. Guilty or not guilty?"

"Wait a minute! Who fired you?" With a sudden inspiration, "Mother Howard didn't go and do that?"

"Mother Howard? You mean the woman who runs the boarding house? Not at all."

"But—"

"I'm not exactly at liberty to state. Suspicion begins to assert itself. Under those conditions, I don't believe—"

"Don't say it! Don't get started along those lines. I know what you're thinking. Knew that was what would happen from the start. And against the wishes of the person who hired me for this work, I—well, I brought the evidence. Here, take a glimpse and then throw it away; tear it up; swallow it; or do anything you want to with it; just so nobody else sees it. Ready?"

He drew forth a small writing card. Fairchild glanced at it. He looked—well, he set up straight in bed. For before him were the engraved words:

"Miss Anita Natalie Richmond."

While across the card was hastily written, in a hand distinctively feminine:

"Mr. Fairchild: This is my good friend. He will help you. There is no fee attached. Please destroy. Anita Richmond."

"But—I don't understand."

"You know Miss—er—the writer of this card, don't you?"

"But why should she—?"

"I see you don't know Miss—the writer of this card at all. That's her nature. Besides—well, all she's got to do with me is crook her finger and I'll jump through. I'm—none of your business. But, anyway, here I am—"

Fairchild could not restrain a laugh. There was something about the man, about his nervous, yet boyish way of speaking, about his enthusiasm, that wiped out suspicion and invited confidence. The owner of the Blue Poppy mine leaned forward.

"But you didn't finish your sentence about—the writer of that card."

"You mean—oh, well, there's nothing to that. I'm in love with her. Been in love with her since I've been knee-high to a duck. So're you. So's every other human being that thinks he's a regular man. So's Maurice Rodaine. Don't know about the rest of you—but I haven't got a chance. Don't let it bother you. The problem right now is to get your partner out of jail. How much money have you got?"

"Only a little more than two thousand."

"Not enough. There'll be bonds on four charges. At the least, they'll be around a thousand dollars apiece. Probabilities are that they'll run around ten thousand for the bunch. How about the Blue Poppy?"

"I don't know what it's worth."

"Neither do I. Neither does the judge. Neither does any one else. Therefore, it's worth at least ten thousand dollars. That'll do the trick. I'd suggest now that you get up, seize your deeds and accompany me to the palace of justice. Otherwise, that partner of yours will have to eat dinner in a place called in unadorned language the hoosegow!"

Soon Fairchild was dressed and walked hurriedly up the street with the voluble attorney. A half-hour more and they were before the court. Fairchild, the lawyer and the jail-worn Harry, his mustache fluttering in more directions than ever.

"Not guilty, Your Honor," said Randolph P. Parrell. "May I ask the extent of the bond?"

The judge adjusted his glasses and studied the information which the district attorney had laid before him.

"In view of the number of charges and the seriousness of each, I must fix an aggregate bond of five thousand dollars, or twelve hundred fifty dollars for each case."

"Thank you, we had come prepared for more. Mr. Fairchild, who is Mr. Harkins' partner, is here to appear as bondsman. The deeds are in his name alone, the partnership existing, as I understand it, upon their word of honor or between them. I refer, Your Honor, to the deeds of the Blue Poppy mine. Would Your Honor care to examine them?"

His Honor would. His Honor did. For a long moment he studied them, and Fairchild, in looking about the courtroom, saw the bailiff in conversation with a tall, thin man, with squint eyes and a scar-marked forehead. A moment later, the judge looked over his glasses.

"Bailiff."

"Yes, Your Honor."

"Have you any information regarding the value of the Blue Poppy mining claims?"

"Sir, I have just been talking to Mr. Rodaine. He says they're well worth the value of the bond."

"How about that Rodaine?" The judge peered down the courtroom.

"They'll do," was his answer, and the judge passed the papers to the clerk of the court.

"Bond accepted. I'll set this trial for November 11."

"Very well, Your Honor." Then he turned with a wide grin to his clients.

"That's all until November."

Out they fled through the narrow aisle of the courtroom. Fairchild's knees knocking the trouser leg of "Squint" Rodaine as they passed. At the door, the attorney turned toward them.

"That was a tall, thin man, with squint eyes and a scar-marked forehead. A moment later, the judge looked over his glasses."

"Bailiff."

"Yes, Your Honor."

"Bailiff."

"Yes, Your Honor."

"Drop in any day this week and we'll go over things," he announced cheerfully. "We put one over on his royal jobs that time, anyway. Hates me from the ground up. Worst we can hope for is a conviction and then a Supreme Court reversal. I'll get him so mad he'll fill the case with errors. He used to be an instructor down at Boulder, and I stuck the pages of a lecture together on him one day. That's why I asked for an early trial. Knew he'd give me a late one. That'll let us have time to stir up a little favorable evidence, which right now we don't possess. Understand—all money that comes from the mine is held in escrow until this case is decided. But I'll explain that. Going to stick around here and bask in the effulgence of really possessing a case. S'long!"

And he turned back into the courtroom, while Fairchild, the dazed Harry stalking beside him, started down the street.

"Ow do you figure it?" asked the Cornishman at last.

"What?"

"Rodaine. 'E' elped us out!"

Fairchild stopped. It had not occurred to him before. But now he saw it: that if Rodaine, as an expert on mining, had condemned the Blue Poppy, it could have meant only one thing, the denial of bond by the judge and the lack of freedom for Harry. Fairchild rubbed a hand across his brow.

"I can't figure it," came at last. "And especially since his son is the accuser and since I got the best of them both last night!"

"Not the best of 'em? You?"

The story was brief in its telling. And it brought no explanation of the sudden amiability displayed by the crooked-faced Rodaine. They went on striving vainly for a reason, at last to stop in front of the post office, as the postmaster leaned out of the door.

"Your name's Fairchild, isn't it?" asked the person of letters.

"Yes."

"Thought so. Sound of the fellows said you was. There's been a letter for you here for two days."

"For me?" Vaguely Fairchild went within and received the missive, a plain, blank envelope without a return address. He turned it over and over in his hand before he opened it—then looked at the postmark—Denver. At last:

"Open it, why don't you?"

Harry's mustache was tickling his ear, as the big mirror stared over his shoulder. Before them were figures and sentences which blurred for a moment, finally to resolve into:

"Mr. Robert Fairchild, 'Ohadi, Colorado."

"Dear Sir: I am empowered by a client whose name I am not at liberty to state, to make you an offer of $50,000 for your property in Clear Creek county, known as the Blue Poppy mine. In replying, kindly address your letter to—"

"Box 180, Denver, Colo."

Harry whistled long and thoughtfully.

"That's a 'ole lot of money!"

"An awful lot, Harry. But why was the offer made? There's nothing to base it on. There's—"

Then for a moment, as they stepped out of the post office, he gave up the thought, even of comparative riches. Twenty feet away, a man and a girl were approaching, talking as though there never had been the slightest trouble between them. It was Maurice Rodaine and Anita Richmond; they came closer, her eyes turned toward Fairchild, and then—

She went on, without speaking, without taking the trouble to notice, apparently, that he had been standing there.

After this, there was little conversation until Harry and Fairchild had reached the boarding house. Then, with Mother Howard for an adviser, the three gathered in the old parlor, and Fairchild related the events of the night before, adding what had happened at the post office, when Anita had passed him without speaking. Mother Howard, her arms folded as usual, bobbed her gray head.

"It's like her, Son," she announced at last. "She's a good girl. I've known her ever since she was a little and not big enough to walk. And she loves her father."

"But—"

"She loves her father. Isn't that enough? The Rodaines have the money and they have almost everything that Judge Richmond owns. It's easy enough to guess what they've done with it—tied it up so that he can't touch it until they're ready for him to do it. And they're not going to do that until they've gotten what they want."

"Which is—?"

"Anita! Any fool ought to be able to know that. That stroke last night was the second one for the Judge. There usually ain't any more after the third one. Now, can't you see why Anita is willing to do anything on earth just to keep peace and just to give her father a little rest and comfort and happiness in the last days of his life? They've got to remember that he ain't like an ordinary father that you can go to and tell all your troubles to. He's laying next door to death, and Anita, just like any woman that's got a great, big, good heart in her, is willing to face worse than death to help him. It's as plain to me as the nose on Harry's face."

"Which is quite plain," agreed Fairchild. "But, Harry, rubbed the illogical proboscis pawed at his mustache and adged to his chair."

"I understand that, all right," he announced at last. "But why should anybody want to buy the mine?"

It was Harry who answered that.

"Fifty thousand dollars is a lot of money," came at last.

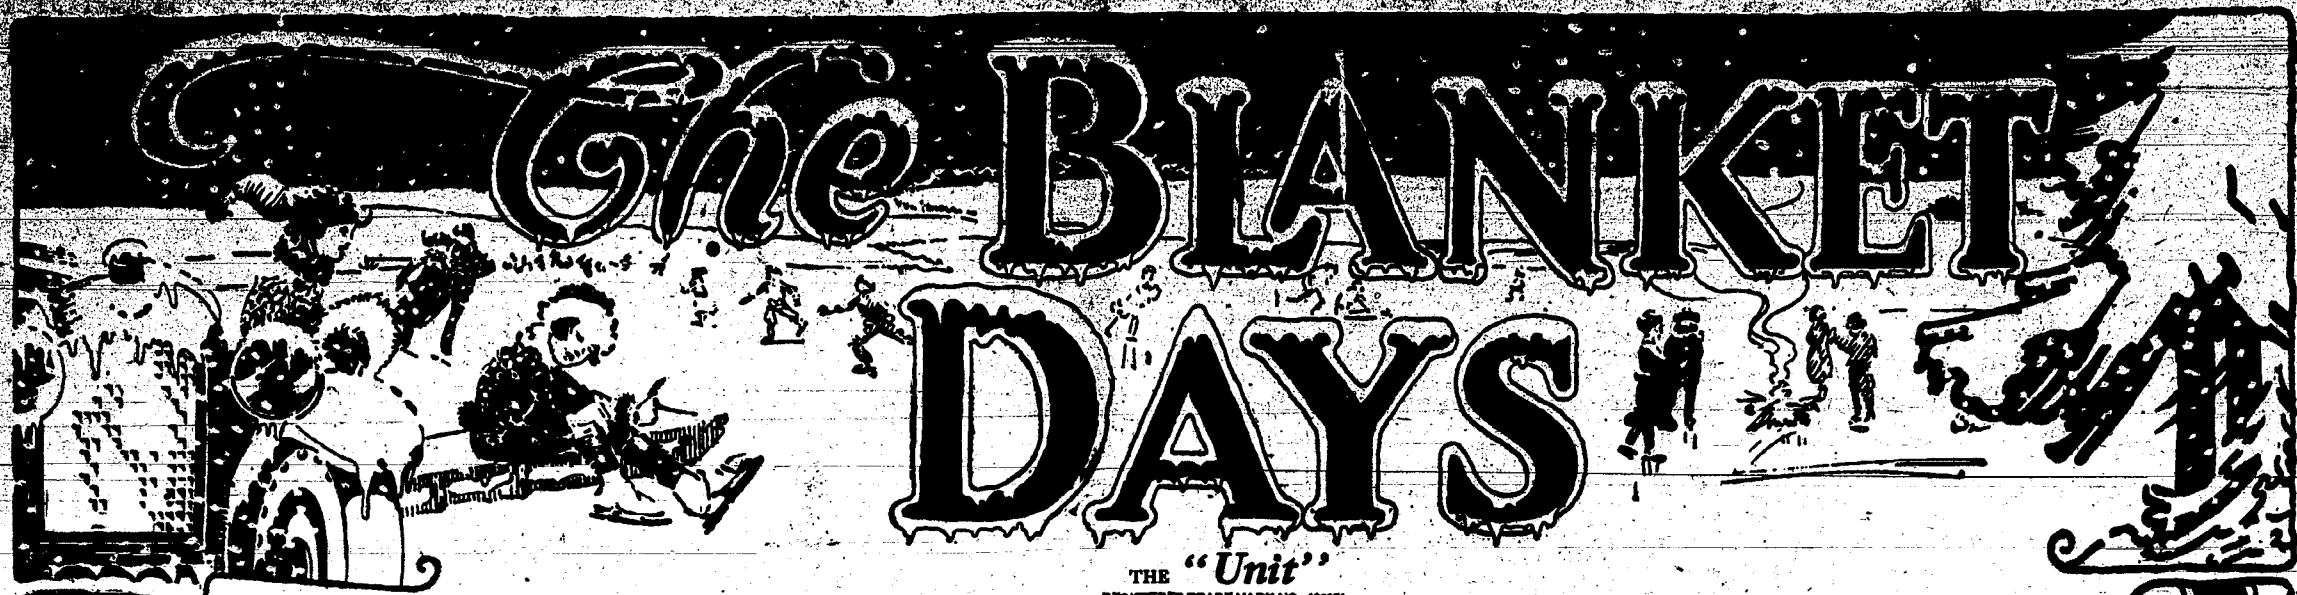

"And what then?" Mother Howard, still looking through unpeeped glasses, took the letter and scanned it. "You two ain't quitters, are you?"

"Go, on!" Harry cried.

"You, you! If you are, get your selves a piece of paper and write to Denver and take the offer. If you ain't—keep on fighting."

"I believe you're right, Mother Howard," Fairchild had reached for the letter again and was staring at it as though for inspiration. "That amount of money seems to be a great deal. Still, if a person will offer that much for a mine when there's nothing in sight to show its value, it ought to mean that there's something dark in the woodpile and that the thing's worth fighting out
